Patent No. 10-1134486

Exposed-Type Heat-Reflective Waterproofing Composite Method and Composite Heat-Reflective Waterproofing Coating Laminate Thereof

■ This is a composite method that bonds an acrylic-based waterproof coating material with a RoofGuard sheet made of long-fiber polyester.

The RoofGuard patented system is a high-performance waterproofing solution designed for crack repair and long-term roof protection. It combines a polyester RoofGuard sheet renowned for its superior tensile strength and heat insulation with an eco-friendly acrylic waterproof coating that is impregnated and layered over the surface. Beyond leakage prevention, RoofGuard completely blocks the peeling and detachment of roofing materials caused by typhoons or extreme climates. Unlike traditional thick-coating systems, RoofGuard’s 7-step layering process builds up multiple ultra-thin membranes, each with a distinct color to ensure clear visual inspection and quality management throughout every stage.

What is Heat-Reflective Coating?

ROOFGUARD [TOP COAT]

ROOFGUARD Premium Heat-Reflective Top Coat is a two-component, water-based coating system composed of a main resin and hardener. It offers excellent water resistance, hiding power, adhesion, and abrasion resistance. Unlike conventional urethane coatings, it provides outstanding flexibility, making it highly suitable for use as a finish coat.

The term 'Heat-Reflective' refers to the property of reflecting, rather than absorbing, radiant heat. The effect is more pronounced with lighter color tones.

PENTECH, in partnership with NOROO Paint, supplies this product under the brand name 'ROOFGUARD Premium Heat-Reflective Top Coat.'

ROOFGUARD [POLYESTER SHEET]

The polyester fiber sheet is manufactured using a stitch-bonded weaving method, providing excellent tensile strength and outstanding reinforcement performance for waterproofing layers. Its smooth surface allows for superior finish quality compared with conventional fiber sheets, especially during impregnation with waterproof coatings.

• For Rooftop and Floor Areas

Depending on the condition of the existing concrete slab or waterproof layer, the sheet can be applied over the existing surface to reduce demolition waste and enhance waterproofing performance, or applied after partial removal where necessary. The entire rooftop floor — including drainage slopes and parapet edges — is impregnated with the sheet for complete coverage. Reinforcement of corner areas is a key part of the installation.

• For Pitched Roofs (Gable / Metal Roofs)

The polyester sheet retains the original curved profile of materials such as metal tiles and color steel plates, while reinforcing any detached or damaged areas prior to application. Once applied — including over flashing areas — the system forms an integrated waterproof layer that prevents asphalt shingles or roof panels from detaching under typhoon or heavy-rain conditions.

• For Crack Repair (ALC Walls / PC Structures)

For cracks larger than 0.3 mm, the sheet is used as a crack-repair reinforcement, providing high tensile strength and durability after impregnation with waterproof material. It is also highly effective for reinforcing corner joints and roof-to-wall transition areas on rooftops or building facades.

[Tensile Strength Comparison by Manufacturing Method]

Weaving Method		Stitch Bonding	Needle Punching	Spun Bonding
Tensile Strength (N/mm)	Length	9	3.1	5.6
	Width	9.1	3.3	6.2

Fiber sheets manufactured using the stitch-bonding method exhibit superior tensile strength compared with other fabrication methods. They show minimal difference between the longitudinal and transverse directions, providing excellent bidirectional reinforcement performance in waterproofing applications.

ROOFGUARD

Patent No. 10-1134486

Exposed-Type Heat-Reflective Waterproofing Composite Method and Heat-Reflective Waterproofing Laminate Thereof

Shingle [Gable] Roof - Patented Construction Method

Last year, Pentech completed waterproofing work on 42 rooftop buildings, and this year, the company has also won the bid for the remaining 38 buildings. That's truly impressive. In Busan, the sea winds are particularly strong, and shingle roofs are generally vulnerable to strong gusts. However, once the roof is fully sealed with the RoofGuard System, there's no need to worry about the roof being blown away by the wind. The finished work looks truly outstanding.

Slab Waterproofing - Patented System

In the past, coating-type or insulation-type waterproofing methods were commonly used for slab roofs. However, a critical drawback of these conventional methods is that cracks occur frequently, and once leakage begins, it's almost impossible to pinpoint the exact source of the problem. As a result, proper repair becomes nearly impossible. RoofGuard has overcome these shortcomings.

Metal Tile Roof

Pentech never settles in one place — we continue to innovate and move forward. That's how the RoofGuard System came to be applied even to metal tile and color steel sheet roofs. Until now, these types of roofs could only be temporarily sealed with silicone, which often failed again after just two or three years. We take pride in pioneering a new solution for a field that was previously considered impossible to waterproof with conventional methods.

Color Steel Roof - The Clear Answer

At some point, color steel roofs became popular across Korea. Many believe that because these roofs are made of rust-resistant metal, they are completely free from leakage problems. However, the real issue lies in the nail penetration points and connection joints, which are always the most vulnerable areas.

RoofGuard provides the definitive solution.

AIREKA: AI-Powered Drone Exterior Inspection and Crack Solution

AIREKA is a compound name derived from Aire and Eureka. Utilizing ground-based drones, AIREKA captures high-quality exterior images of buildings and integrates AI technology to provide a true diagnosis of the building's exterior. The AI-based exterior inspection system includes high-resolution image capture, accurate location mapping, and automatically identifies key information such as cracks, peeling, efflorescence, and corrosion.

The collected inspection results are visualized in 3D to precisely identify the location and condition of defects on each surface, allowing users to grasp the status at a glance. It also quantifies defect locations and areas, enabling comparative analysis over time and supporting objective data-based diagnostics. This data-driven inspection process enhances objectivity, consistency, and efficiency.

Patent No. 10-2470660

Repair, Reinforcement, and Waterproofing Method for Building Exterior Walls

Patent No. 10-1857764

Sheet Repair Method for Building Exterior Walls and Portable Fixing Device Therefor

A Revolution That Breaks the Conventional Rules of Recoating. Why Should It Be Exterior Waterproofing, Not Just Wall Painting?

Persistent leaks that never seem to stop - did you know the real cause might be your exterior walls?
Leaks don't just come from the roof where water collects - they can seep through the walls, too.

The First Leak Point of Exterior Walls: ALC Blocks

Assembled lightweight concrete (ALC) wall panels are made with a porous, aerated structure, which naturally absorbs moisture and often becomes a primary cause of leakage. During the thawing season, spalling or fragmentation of ALC blocks can frequently occur on high-rise apartment exteriors, posing serious safety hazards due to falling debris.

A Waterproofing Method That Completely Envelops the Exterior Wall

The Second Leak Point of Exterior Walls: Inter-Floor Joints

At the connection joints between precast concrete (PC) structures, Dryvit systems, and other exterior materials, rainwater penetrates through the seams and flows down along the outer wall, eventually seeping into the building interior. During freeze-thaw cycles, the trapped moisture leads to corrosion of reinforcing steel, which causes delamination of the concrete and results in serious damage to the building's structural durability.

Repair of Floor Joint Using RoofGuard Waterproofing Tape

The Third Leak Point of Exterior Walls: Neglected Micro-Cracks

Under current building regulations, micro-cracks of approximately 0.3 mm are typically treated with simple surface repairs. However, such fine cracks tend to expand over time, and depending on external weather conditions and physical stress, they can later develop into serious structural and waterproofing defects. Early treatment of micro-cracks is critical - it ultimately determines the building's lifespan.

A System That Even Seals Fine Cracks on Balconies

The Fourth Leak Point of Exterior Walls: Ordinary Water-Based Paints

According to long-term maintenance plans, the repainting cycle for building exteriors is typically every eight years. However, exterior walls coated with ordinary water-based paints tend to fade easily and lack resistance to environmental pollution. Within three years, discoloration and contamination begin to appear, and the paint film loses its resistance to exterior wall cracking, leading to resident complaints and a significant loss of aesthetic appearance.

Solving Recoating and Micro-Cracks at Once

Exterior Waterproof Recoating

“When the exterior was first repainted, I wondered why they went through the trouble of using such a strong solvent-based paint — but the result was astonishing. The surface had a bright, glossy finish, and water simply rolled off the wall without soaking in. That’s what real waterproofing looks like. I’m 120% satisfied.”

Juan Hanshin Hue Apartment*

Parapet Waterproofing

“At first, I only considered repainting the exterior walls. But after studying the issue, I realized that completing the waterproofing for both the rooftop and parapet together was the only way to completely stop leaks. So I convinced the residents — and it turned out to be absolutely the right decision.”

ALC Block Waterproofing

“A leak occurred at a factory producing high-tech components. POSCO E&C, the construction company, recommended Pentech’s YouTube channel. After the project, everyone was extremely satisfied with the results. We’re planning to entrust Pentech again this year for rooftop and additional building waterproofing work — after all, their performance has even been verified by our headquarters in Japan.”

PENTER GUARD

PENTERGUARD Flooring System

One of the biggest challenges during underground parking lot construction is complaints caused by strong odors. Most conventional flooring materials contain volatile organic compounds (VOCs) that release the distinct thinner-like smell. However, PenterGuard's hardener is formulated with natural ingredients, which means no harsh or irritating odor during or after application. PenterGuard also enhances the surface strength of indoor concrete and mortar floors, and provides excellent anti-slip and noise-reduction performance. It is specially designed to maximize safety and durability in underground parking environments, offering users a more comfortable and pleasant space.
